

Forewords from the Project Manager;

"I welcome you to first true online Doctor Service in the World!"

"Let me tell you a little bit of history of this project. As an engineer I spend most of my time in rural communities when offering my services to various mining companies in Western Australia. I have experienced myself how difficult it is to gain access to medical services from these remote areas and wanted to help so I came up with a solution. This was when idea of DocNet was born.

Our company, Hoover Industries is financing development of DocNet as a non-profit project.

Our aim is to equip every rural community across Australia with all common GP medical devices which non-medical personnel can operate with guidance from professionals through the Internet.

We started from developing an affordable, yet high quality Ultrasound scanner and other medical devices suitable for networking and after that we built a Web server which allows everyone to be connected.

DocNet was originally designed to operate "closed circuit" -only to connect these approximately 2500 communities to about 200 medical specialists across Australia, but while developing the script we decided to make it open for everyone Globally and use percentage of the consultation fees to finance this rural healthcare overhaul. By doing so, there is no need to use any of taxpayer's money for this project.

*Australian Federal Government has done a good job by establishing a new eHealth project, which has paved a way for us making our online consultation service possible. However, we want to keep politics out of DocNet to secure continuity of our quality services regardless what will happen in stormy political fields. All ongoing expenses for the DocNet are already paid 10 years ahead and by that time it should carry out by itself. If not, Hoover Industries will ensure future funding. DocNet is here to stay.

As I see, this new online service proves that the Healthcare revolution has begun and subsequently it will change the way how medical services are delivered to people, wherever they are, around the clock. So why not get yourself your own account and enjoy being a pioneer in this revolution?"

HOW IT WORKS FOR THE CLIENTS?

Using DocNet is very easy and self-explanatory, but there are some things you may want to know about this service.

We have wide variety of medical professionals to choose from and they are all called "Doctors" to make it simple, even though not everyone have that level of qualifications. It is free to browse Doctors profiles to see their qualifications and other details, so please take your time to choose the one you need.

You will pay only when you are in private one-on-one webcam consultation with our Doctors.

Please ensure your Internet connection is fast enough for video conference. To gain perfect video quality you will need minimum 64KB/s (512Kb/s) up and down stream. Charge is per minute and amount varies depending of Doctors. Please check their charge per minute before consultation. DocNet is open for whole World and this is why we are using our own "currency" called "chips". One chip equals $0.50 (fifty cents) in Australian Dollars.

Last but not least, remember to be patient. This is new service and it will take some time to gain matching balance between amount of Doctors and Clients online. New Doctors will be added into system all the time and DocNet is here to stay, so it is only matter of time when you will find exactly what you are looking for, any time of the day.

Is it worth while doing?

At the beginning of the DocNet almost no one has an account yet, so this is the time to do it.

After 10-20 years from now nearly everyone has an account so there is no more to join.

Let's do some calculations to see what we can expect.

According Kaiser Family Foundation ( <http://www.kff.org> ) year 2009 average American resident spent $8.160 USD for health care. 52.9% of that could have been done through the DocNet. We have to remember that these figures are likely to become even higher, because people would use the service more, when it is conveniently available. Ask yourself how often you were thinking of going to see Doctor, but didn't have time to do so?

Let's make a bit pessimistic estimate and presume that this customer will use only 50% of statistical average.

That equals $4.080USD per year. Your commission will be $40.06USD per year. That is nearly one Australian Dollar per week. It doesn't sound much, doesn't it? This is how your income starts growing. Every click through which lead to opening a new account will add one dollar per week to your income. All you need is 1200 clicks and you will earn same as average engineer in Australia ($62.000 per year). To get to this level may take years to happen or maybe just a few days. It is all up to how many visitors your site will have.
